WEDNESDAY,....SEPTEMBER 2, 1863.

The Inauguration of Governor Bramlette.

The ceremonies, appropriate to this important event in the history of Kentucky, took place in our city on yesterday. The attendance of ladies and gentlemen from all parts of the State was larger than usual upon such occasions-and the feelings which seem to pervade the vast crowd during the progress of the exercises, was ample evidence of the earnest appreciation of the people, of the immense importance and meaning of the recent demonstration of the freemen of Kentucky which, on the first Monday in August, manifested itself in the glolovalty. No one present entertained any doubt of the true position of this State, and every one felt that Kentucky, would always be, as she has ever been, immovably loval to the government of our fathers and thoroughly devoted to the principles of constitutional

At 10 o'clock in the morning, the procession, composed of the 2d Maryland Regiment, distinguished officers of the army, civilians, and the various committees, formed in front of the State House, and moved to the Capitol Hotel, where General Bramlette was received, seated in an open carriage, zens of Kentucky, expressed with unpreceattended by Governor Robinson, Col. Rich-dented unanimity, at the recent elections, ard T. Jacob, and the Hon. Joshua F. Bell, the public square, where the exercises were to be conducted from a large platform erected for the purpose.

After the vast crowd had been arranged licious and soul-stirring music from the 48th Pennsylvania Band, Gen. John M. Harlan, on behalf of the citizens of Frankfort and Franklin county, delivered, in an eloquent threaten, welcome to the capitol. Gen. H. spoke in substance as follows:

Gen. Bramlette: As the honored organ of the citizens of Frankfort and Franklin county-a loyal city and a loyal county-I welcome you to the capitol of the State, and tender you, most cordially, the hospitalities of this people. We congratulate you sir. upon your elevation, by an unprecedented majority, to the distinguished position of Chief Magistrate of this Commonwealth.

To be the Governor of Kentucky, at any time, has been esteemed an honor of which any citizen might well be proud. But to be the chosen leader of her people at this, surely enough to fill the measure of any

It is, indeed, a critical period in Kentucky's history, for she occupies a central position in a great and powerful nation, convulsed by the most stupendous and eventful civil war the world has yet known-a war involving, republican goverment.

It seems but vesterday, sir, when we were an united, contented, and prosperous people, having, as we thought, common interests common destiny-all alike devoted to our country-all alike cherishing the glorithe dangers passed and the sacrifices endured by our fathers, and with the proudest delight, departed from constitutional faith. people were making to power and greatness. government. In the presence of these tremendous issues, Kentucky has acted her part wisely and nobly. She has been true to the memory of her illustrious dead. She has been true to her own high sense of honor and of right. She has pursued the even tenor of her way, regardless of the clamors of ultraists of either section, who, differing upon all other questions, have vied with each other in heaping opprobrium upon the course which her people have deemed it their duty to pursue. Time, however, has vindicated the unselfish patriotism of her people. Profoundly regretting the necessity which brought them into armed conflict with their brethren, they yet regarded the perservation they arrayed themselves under the star-gemmed banner of constitutional liberty, and upon the battle-fields of this memorable revolution, have nobly attested their devotion to the government of their fathers.

Her soldiers upon the battle field, and her citizens in all the peaceful modes, recognized by the laws of the land, have indicated to their countrymen, in unmistakable terms, that they intend to remain, now and forever in the Union, and under the National Constitution, the only bond of that Union. GEN. JOHN W. FINNELL, -We understand that Adjutant General Finnell, having re-turns let a nation rejoice! The nearest and signed the office which he has so ably filled, dearest relations of life have been rudely was tendered a re-appointment by Governor Bramlette, but declined it, as other important, professional and private business, required his undivided attention.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE GOVERNOR .- The Governor has appointed Hon. E. J. Van Winkle, of Somerset, as Secretary of State; Lt. Col. John Boyle, of the 9th Kentucky Cavalry, Adjutant General; and Samuel G. Suddarth, Esq., of Adair county, Quarter Master General.

Ex-Gov. J. F. ROBINSON.—This eminent citizen, leaves for his home, in Georgetown this morning, attended by an escort of our leading citizens. In our next issue we will have occasion to speak of his distinguished damage done to the fruit or crops. services, and give expression to the universal regret which this community feels at the interruption of the delightful associations which his presence amongst us had created.

We give our readers an opportunity at the earliest moment, to read the Inaugural Address of Governor Bramlette, and this Green river regiment. while no word of ours could increase the desire of all to read it, we cannot forego an expression of our very high admiration for it. It is a splendid document, and remarkable for the ability, wisdom, patriotism, and honest purpose and spirit which characterize every part of it. It is, in every regard, get it, say I." These startling words, uttered a noble and faithful expression of the loyalty and political faith of a people, who stand among the first in the nation for all government of their fathers,

The influence which the opinions and sentiments, so aptly and eloquently set forth in this address, will exert in checking the tendency to radicalism which is, unfortunately prevailing in some of the political parties in the loyal States, will prove of vast benefit to the cause of the Union.

The noble utterances of a man, who has hearts and minds of the conservative masses of the nation, and urge them to oppose, by the powerful and irresistable means of the ballot-box and public opinion, "all uncon stitutional, all wicked, unwise, or hurtful measures of policy," which party hate, selfishness, and zeal, may endeavor to impress upon the nation. We believe that the sentiments which he so correctly represents as those of the people of this State, will meet a hearty response from the conservative and loyal people of the North He says:

"We affiliate with the loyal men north and south, whose object and policy is, to PRESERVE the Union and the Constitution, unchanged and unbroken, and to restore the people to har mony and peace with the government as they were before the rebellion.
